

HER GOOD FORTUNE

After Years Spent in Vain Effort.

Mrs. Mary E. H. Rouse, of Cambridge, N. Y., says: "Five years ago I had a bad fall and it affected my kidneys. Severe pains in my back and hips became constant, and sharp twinges followed any exertion. The kidney secretions were badly disordered. I lost flesh and grew too weak to work. Though constantly using medicine I despaired of being cured until I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. Then relief came quickly, and in a short time I was completely cured. I am now in excellent health."

PICNIC FOR THE PUP.

His Devotion to Duty Rewarded by Strange Luxuries.

A Boston bulldog owned by George H. Clapp was so determined to capture a woodchuck which he had chased into its den that he followed after and staid in the hole all night.

When the dog had got his jaws about the enemy he found that he could not get out owing to the small size of the animal's hole.

Rather than lose his prey the dog retained his hold on the woodchuck over night, and was helped out by his master in the morning. The dog was nearly exhausted, and revived after feeding and drinking in a curious manner.

He consumed about two quarts of unguarded ice cream, which had been set aside for a party, and capped the climax by falling into a bucket of lemonade.—Worcester (Mass.) Telegram.

Appreciates Teachers' Work.

One woman says that when her children bring home their school reports at the end of the month she always finds five minutes in which to write a personal letter to the teachers. If there is something that the children have learned that surprised her she writes a note of thanks and appreciation, and if the reports are unsatisfactory she writes offering to help the teacher in any way she may suggest. Needless to say, the teachers are appreciative, as any one will know who has ever taught school.

The value of this year's crops of various sorts raised in the United States is placed at $8,000,000,000, or nearly nine times the interest bearing debt of the country and enough over to buy all the railroads of the land.

REMAINS THE SAME.

Well Brewed Postum Always Palatable

The flavour of Postum, when boiled according to directions, is always the same—mild, distinctive, and palatable. It contains no harmful substance like caffeine, the drug in coffee, and hence may be used with benefit at all times.

"Believing that coffee was the cause of my torpid liver, sick headache and misery in many ways," writes an Ind. lady, "I quit and bought a package of Postum about a year ago.

"My husband and I have been so well pleased that we have continued to drink Postum ever since. We like the taste of Postum better than coffee, as it has always the same pleasant flavour, while coffee changes its taste with about every new combination or blend.

"Since using Postum I have had no more attacks of gall colic, the heaviness has left my chest, and the old, common, every-day headache is a thing unknown." "There's a Reason."

TALK OF NEW YORK

Gossip of People and Events Told in Interesting Manner.

Mrs. Thomas Ryan Planning New Gift

NEW YORK.—Mrs. Thomas Fortune Ryan, who already is famous for her lavish generosity to the American Catholic church, is contemplating another magnificent gift to Georgetown university, Washington.

This college is the alma mater of Mrs. Ryan's sons, and she is devoted to its interests. She has built a fine hall, called Ryan hall, which serves as the college refectory, and she has given magnificent china and silver with which to furnish it. Recently she expressed the wish to have the college entrance more in keeping with the dignity and standing of the institution.

At present two streets filled with squalid brick tenements crowd to the very door of the campus. She will purchase these two entire squares, transform them into a park and place a handsome iron railing with a massive gate, a copy of some famous gates in Florence, to guard the entrance.

Mrs. Ryan spends much of her time in her Washington home, on the corner of Eighteenth and I streets. It formerly was the residence of Mrs. Harriet Lane Johnson, presiding lady of the White House under President Buchanan, her uncle. Mrs. Ryan has not kept up the hospitable table traditions of her mansion.

Her life is as retired as a nun's. She gives a few dinner parties during the season, principally to the dignitaries of the Catholic church and to old friends who are passing through the city. She keeps no reception day and her home is closed to all those who call for social purposes only. Her time is spent in organizing charities and in answering letters and reading reports of work she has in hand.

In her Washington home she maintains a chapel with a chaplain from Georgetown college to attend. It is only a small circular room built for a breakfast room, but probably not in the country can a richer oratory be seen. The gold altar vessels and the handsome silk vestments were made from the jewels and the dresses of Mrs. Ryan's only daughter, a girl who died about ten years ago when about 16 years of age. During Christmas this chapel is open to children and the friends of Mrs. Ryan.

Twins Have Fun with Process Server

COUNT IGNATZ and Count Carlos Gombossai are twins. Their friends at the Waldorf, which they frequent, say the Gombossais look as much alike as two Hungarian husars in uniform.

Miss Loretta Pheneey has begun suit in the supreme court against Count Ignatz for $50,000 damages, alleging breach of promise. Her counsel, Louis Schwartz, gave the papers in the case to J. W. Staff, a process server. The other day Mr. Schwartz, his clerk, Kerz Taffe, and Staff went to the Waldorf cafe. Twirling his mustache and talking to friends, stood Count Ignatz. A little distance from him was Count Carlos, twisting his mustache and talking to friends.

As Staff, papers in hand, hurried toward Ignatz Gombossai, the count grasped the situation instantly.

"Do not bother me," he said, laughingly, waving Staff away. "I am Count Carlos Gombossai. My brother, Count Ignatz, whom you seek, probably, is over there."

Ignatz strolled from the cafe; Staff hurried over to Count Carlos, who grasped the situation, too.

"Yes," said he, readily accepting the papers, "I am Count Ignatz Gombossai. Oh, it is the young lady's suit, is it?"

To give his twin brother a good start, Count Carlos leisurely looked over the papers, then, throwing them on the floor, rushed from the cafe and ran at top speed east on Thirty-first street. Staff overtook Carlos at Madison avenue.

"Ah, you are not clever," exclaimed the count, laughing hilariously. "We have thrown the dust in your eyes. I am Count Carlos Gombossai," and he handed the process server his card.

But, seeing one Gombossai run, Schwartz and his clerk grew suspicious and hastened after the other.

"We will serve both," said Schwartz, "then there can be no mistake."

They caught up with Count Ignatz at Forty-second street. Staff rejoined them. Ignatz, laughing, confessed to his ruse and the papers were served on him.

Descendant of Kings a Gotham Cook

A DAUGHTER of the Montezumas is in this city mastering the art of domestic science. She will carry it back to Mexico and at the bidding of her government introduce it into that country of romance and tradition.

Mme. Guadalupe de Haro is the name of this beauty, who has coal black hair, deep brown eyes and a complexion of creamy white, and who proudly says she is thoroughly Mexican and a descendant of the Montezumas. She has been in New York a year and a half studying household arts night and day as taught in public and private schools and colleges. She is now studying in the summer school of the University of New York.

Mme. Guadalupe de Haro is the daughter of a great financier, born to wealth and luxury. Through adversity her husband lost his fortune and died and the widow had to work for a living.

Mexican women of degree take little interest in the economy of their households. Such things are left to the servants. So when Mme. de Haro faced the necessity of earning a living she awoke to her helplessness. Through study and inquiry she found that there was a woman's world of activity that she had never dreamed existed. Then came the offer of her government to send her to New York to study domestic science and she accepted it gladly.

Not Guilty.

"Now, Mrs. McCarthy," said counsel for the defense, "please tell us simply as you can your version of this affair. It is alleged that you referred to Mrs. Callahan in disparaging terms."

"Not a bit of it. I didn't say anything about disparaging nor disparaging nor any other garden truck, except that I said she had a nose like a squash and her complexion was as bad as a tomato in the last stages. Yes can see for yerself if it ain't the truth."

Sensitive Papa.

"George, you must be more careful. Papa thinks you meant to wound his feelings."

"Why, what did I say?"

"You remember that when you ordered beer at the cafe last night you called it 'suds' in a very loud voice."

"Well?"

"You must have forgotten that papa got all his money making soap."
